We imagined many possibilities for this innovative product that harnesses the great quality and wide recognition of the Tillamook brand. Consumers add the shredded cheese and spices provided to milk, heat and serve. Use it as a sauce or a dip; we enjoyed it as a base for macaroni and cheese. Enterprising home chefs could take this product in many directions, while savvy retailers could build clever solution-based displays to inspire them. The line's varieties are 3 Cheese, Creamy Alfredo, Spicy Queso and Aged Cheddar.

We liked Traina's original sun-dried tomato ketchup, and now they've taken it up a notch: This Sicilian version delivers a wonderful flavor — with a blend of garlic, fennel and spices — that not only dresses up ketchup's usual partners, but also opens up a host of recipe applications for the creative home chef. According to Traina, there are more than 4 pounds of tomatoes in every bottle of this ketchup, which also is kosher, gluten-free and vegan.

We first encountered these at Natural Products Expo West and were impressed by them and their brand story, created by a former longtime vegetarian now committed to humane, sustainable organic meat. The beef is pasture-raised and grass-fed, the chicken is free-range, and all are delicious. The Mediterranean-style beef patties contain fire-roasted garlic, onion and tomato, plus rosemary, spearmint and citrus; the Umami beef patties feature garlic, onions and Shiitake mushrooms; and the Chipotle chicken patties are blended with poblano salsa, garlic, onion, peppers and spices.
